NETHERBLOOM

Book of Remembrance

The Bride Who Stayed Below

The old grave-texts told the dead: do not drink from Lethe; find the spring of Memory. This Book is that spring.

Keeping the Book

The Book has one page per Reach. Each page has four slots, Place, Person, Deed and Feeling, which fill a sentence about the soul's life.

You may inscribe a card when it Resonates, if its memory's slot is still empty on the current page. A Key Memory card may be inscribed whenever it is played face up. An inscribed card leaves the deck for good: you trade a useful card for a memory the soul will keep.

Chapter Blessing. When a page holds 3 memories (2 for the Garland Girl), the river grants the first of these that applies: mend a Fracture, drain Black Water, or return a forgotten card.

At the end, the Book is read aloud. Slots never filled read "...but this, the river has taken".

> Tuck an inscribed card into the well for its slot: slide its four corners under the slits. Slide it out again to reuse the card next game.

THE SOUL OF THIS BOOK

The Bride Who Stayed Below

She died on her wedding day. Her husband came down into the dark to bring her back, on one condition: he must not look back until they reached the light. One step from the surface, he turned. She has stood in the shadows ever since, deciding whether to remember his face or let it go.

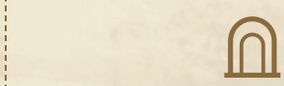

Twist: The first time she would Linger in the dark, she is pulled one space back instead of forgetting.

Key Memory: his face, the instant he turned to look at me

Almost saved, once.

I · Who I Was

I was born near...

PLACE

...but this, the river has taken

I loved...

PERSON

...but this, the river has taken

I once...

DEED

...but this, the river has taken

and ever since I have carried...

FEELING

...but this, the river has taken

☐ Chapter Blessing

Keepsakes ☐ ☐ ☐

II · What I Did

At...

PLACE

...but this, the river has taken before...

PERSON

...but this, the river has taken

I...

DEED

...but this, the river has taken

The price was...

FEELING

...but this, the river has taken

III · What I Carry

I go now, leaving...

PLACE

...but this, the river has taken

forgiving...

PERSON

...but this, the river has taken

unable to undo the day I...

DEED

...but this, the river has taken

holding only...

FEELING

...but this, the river has taken

☐ Chapter Blessing

Keepsakes ☐ ☐ ☐

The Far Shore

At the Far Shore the Keeper lifts the veil and offers the cup. What the soul remembers decides how it drinks.

- ☐ Inscribed in the Book: kept and spoken. The soul crosses remembering what mattered most.
- ☐ Forgotten: lost to the river. The soul goes on, lighter and emptier, without it.
- ☐ Never written (still in the deck, a hand or the discard pile): never faced. Some things go across unsaid.

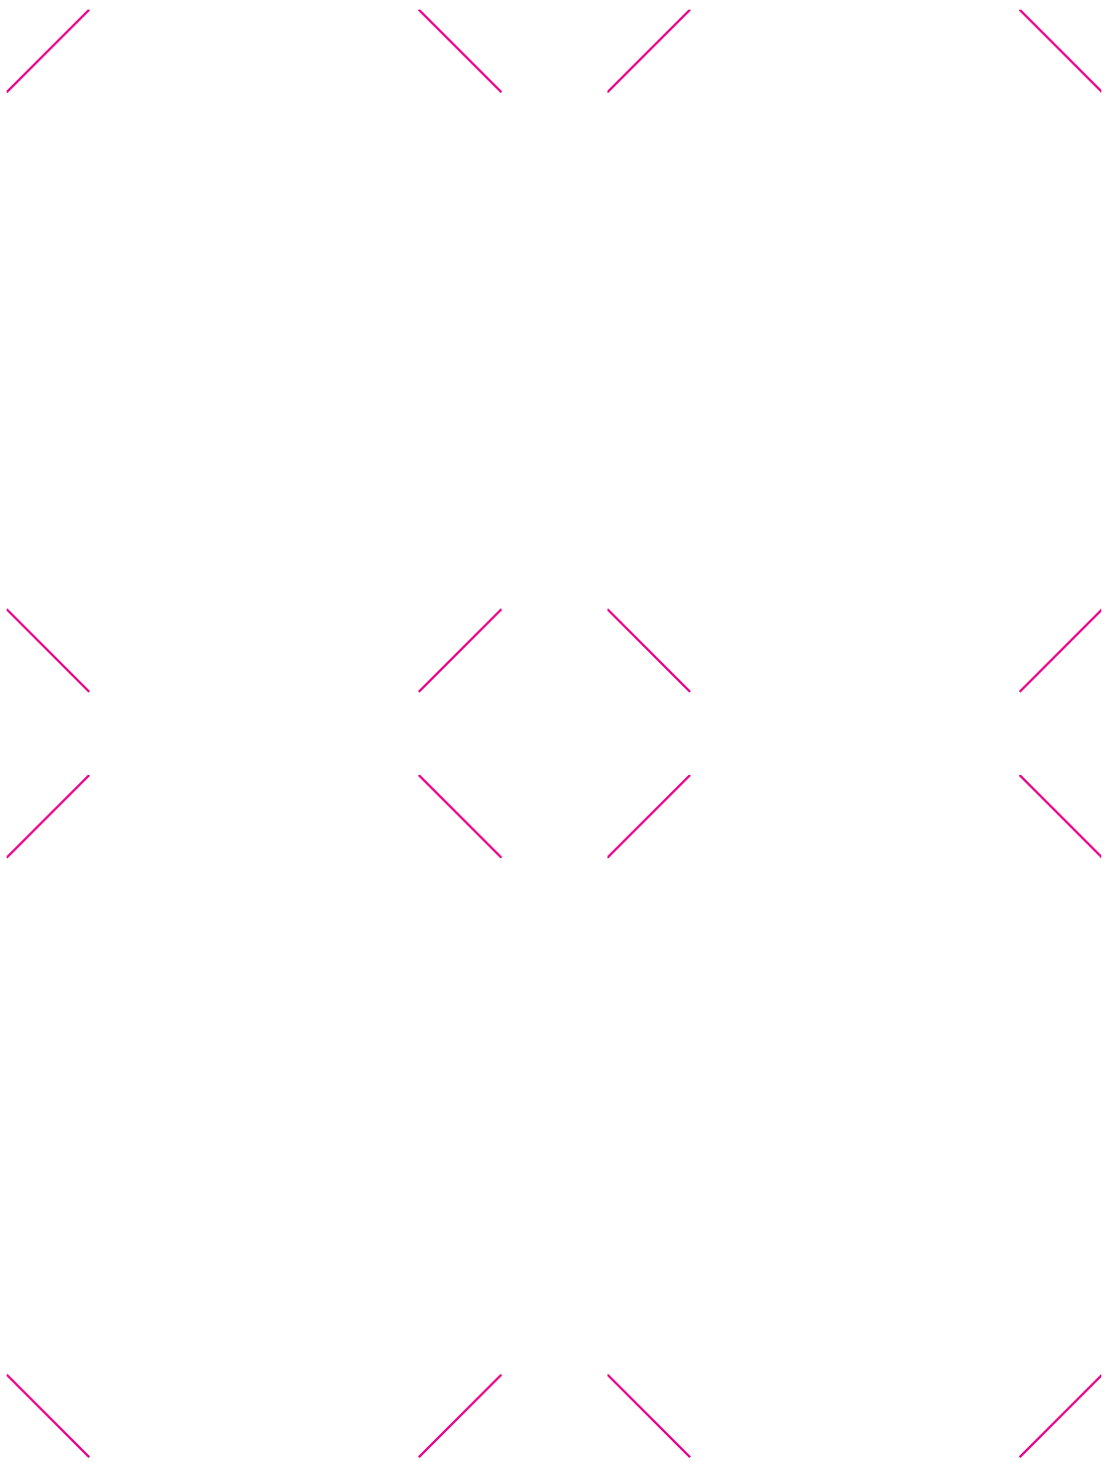

Then read the Book aloud, page by page. Even a lost crossing leaves a story: blanks read "...but this, the river has taken", and the epilogue tells how the soul was lost. Every game writes a different life.

FERRYMEN _____ LANTERN _____ DATE _____

NETHERBLOOM

RALPH LAUXIE

DIE LINE · pages 4–6 · photo-corner slits (magenta), 11 mm diagonals at each corner of the four 66 × 91 mm wells