NETHERBLOOM

Book of Remembrance

Open Crossing

The old grave-texts told the dead: do not drink from Lethe; find the spring of Memory. This Book is that spring.

Keeping the Book

The Book has one page per Reach. Each page has four slots, Place, Person, Deed and Feeling, which fill a sentence about the soul's life.

You may inscribe a card when it Resonates, if its memory's slot is still empty on the current page. A Key Memory card may be inscribed whenever it is played face up. An inscribed card leaves the deck for good: you trade a useful card for a memory the soul will keep.

Chapter Blessing. When a page holds 3 memories (2 for the Garland Girl), the river grants the first of these that applies: mend a Fracture, drain Black Water, or return a forgotten card.

At the end, the Book is read aloud. Slots never filled read "...but this, the river has taken".

> Tuck an inscribed card into the well for its slot: slide its four corners under the slits. Slide it out again to reuse the card next game.

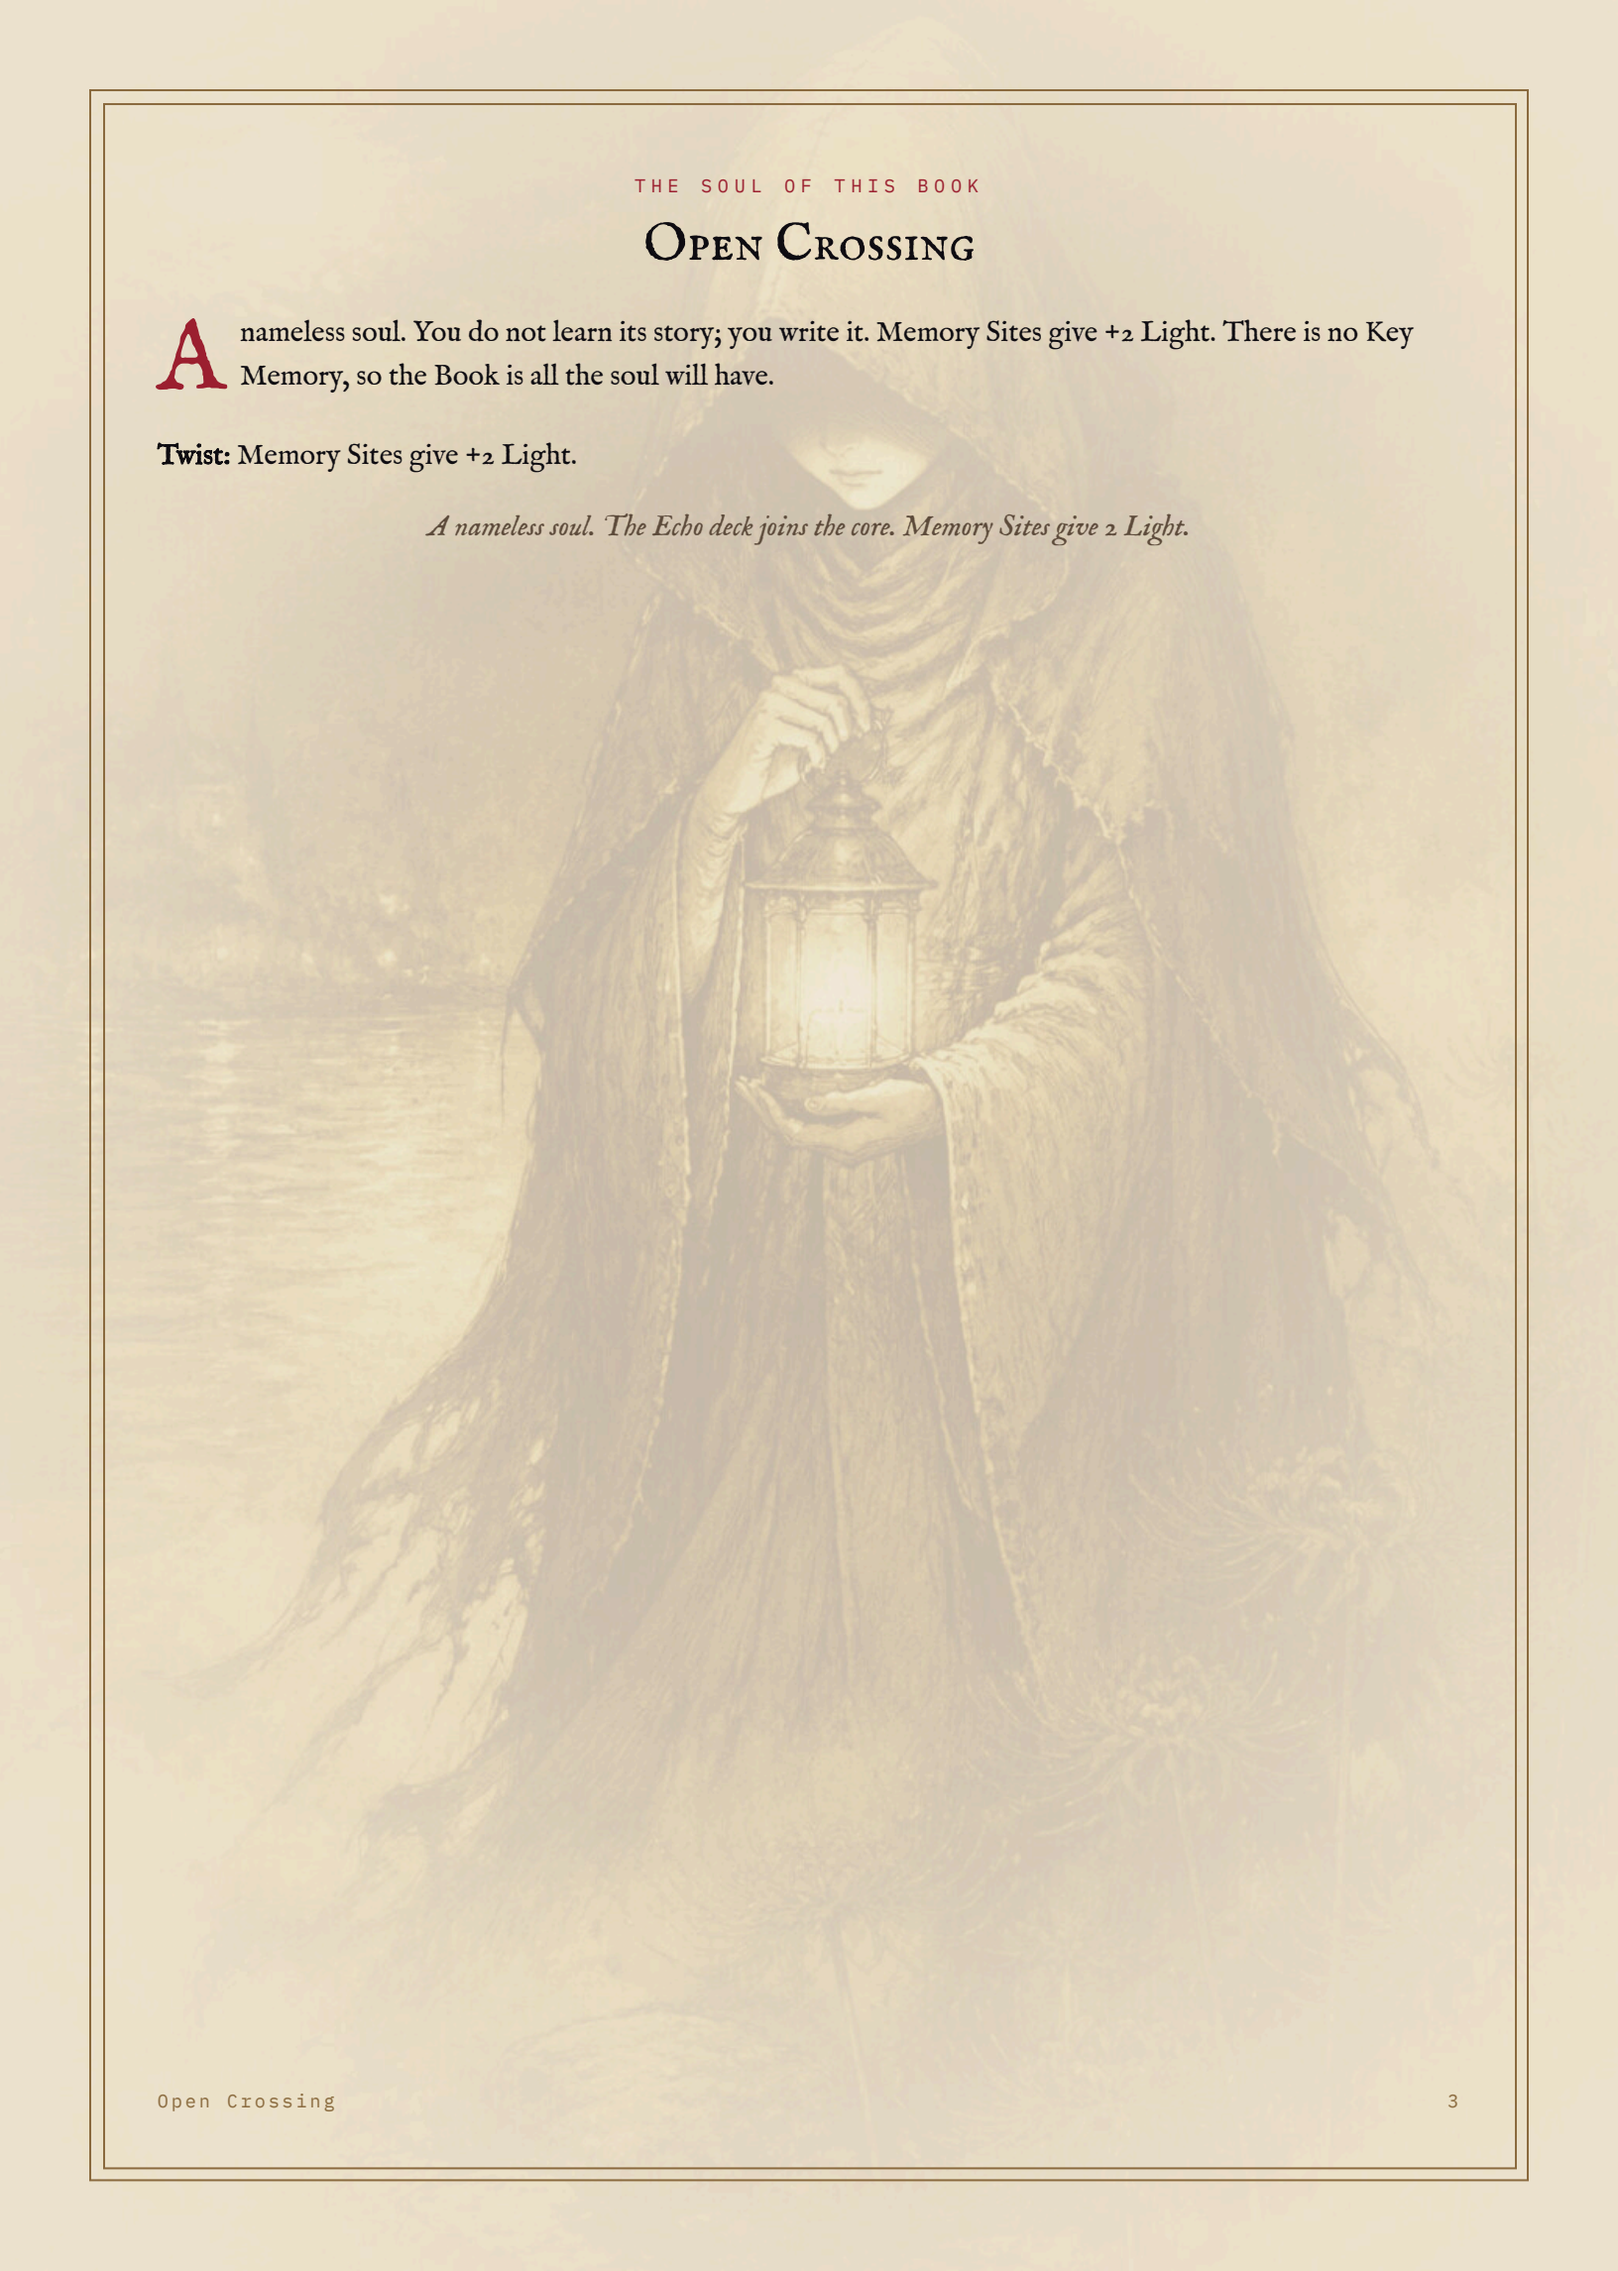

THE SOUL OF THIS BOOK

Open Crossing

A nameless soul. You do not learn its story; you write it. Memory Sites give +2 Light. There is no Key Memory, so the Book is all the soul will have.

Twist: Memory Sites give +2 Light.

A nameless soul. The Echo deck joins the core. Memory Sites give 2 Light.

I · Who I Was

I was born near...

I loved...

I once...

and ever since I have carried...

☐ Chapter Blessing

Keepsakes ☐ ☐ ☐

II · What I Did

At...

PLACE

...but this, the river has taken before...

PERSON

...but this, the river has taken

I...

DEED

...but this, the river has taken

The price was...

FEELING

...but this, the river has taken

☐ Chapter Blessing

Keepsakes ☐ ☐ ☐

III · What I Carry

I go now, leaving...

forgiving...

unable to undo the day I...

holding only...

☐ Chapter Blessing

Keepsakes ☐ ☐ ☐

The Far Shore

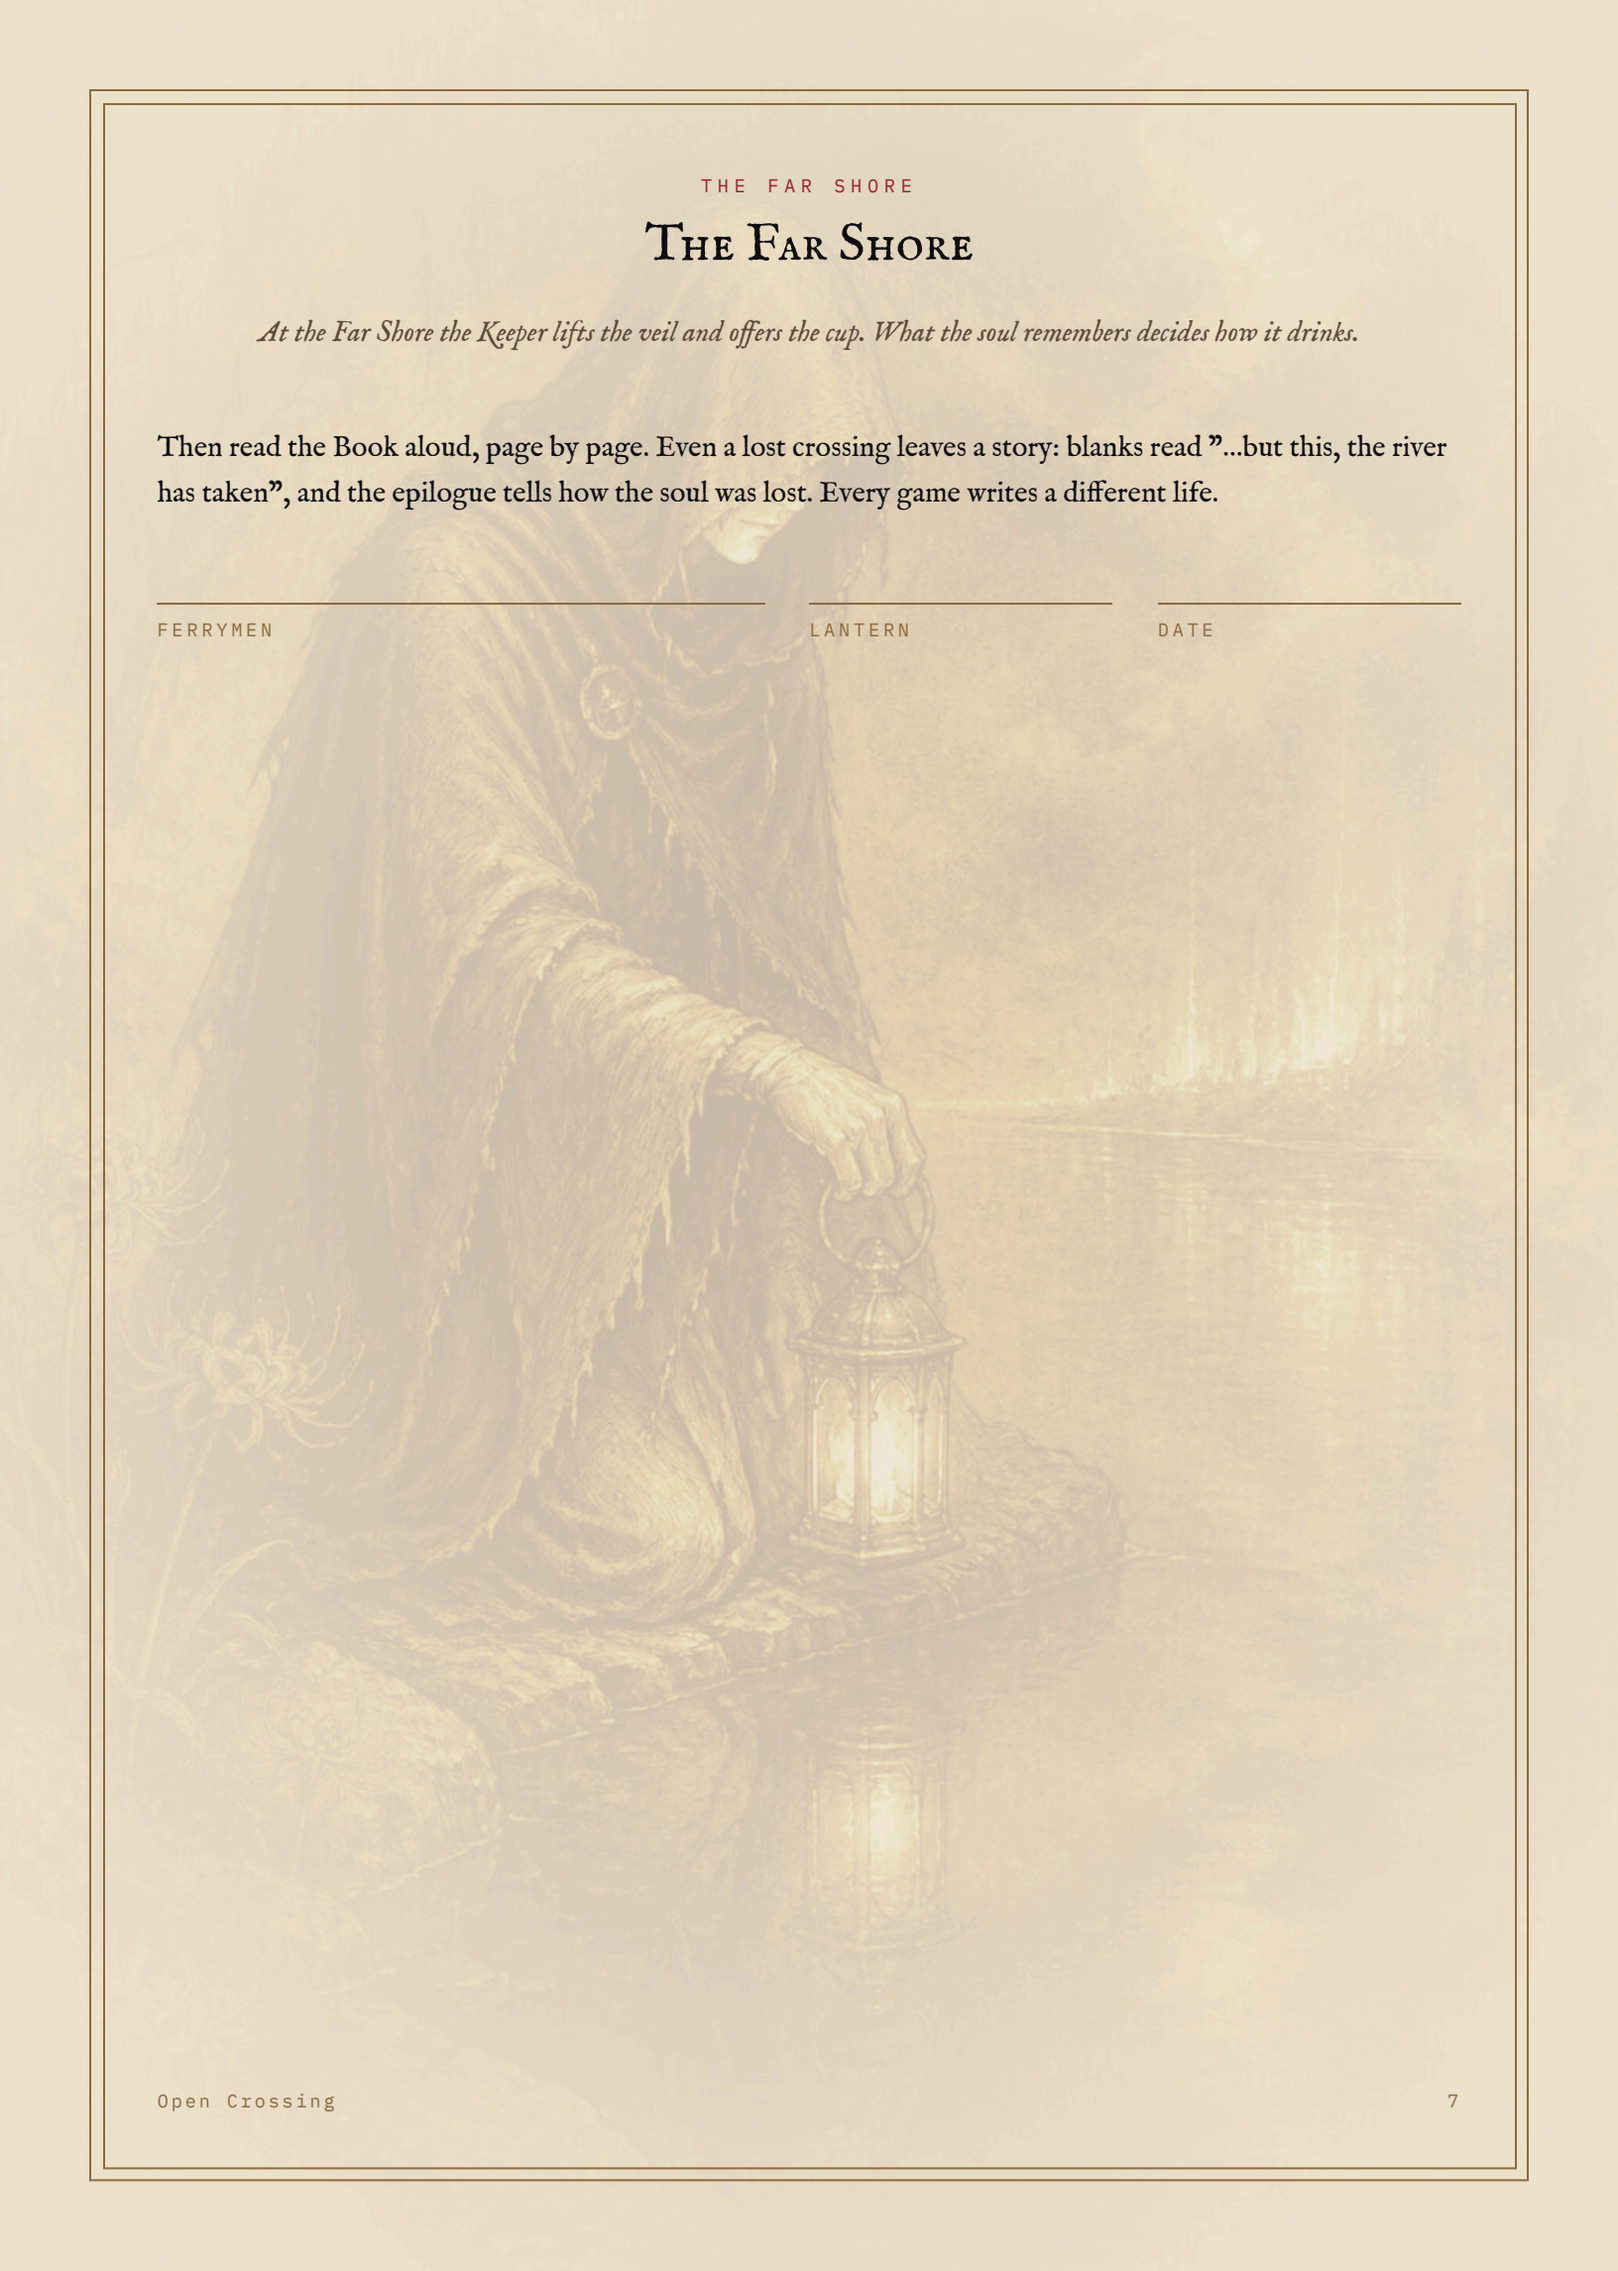

At the Far Shore the Keeper lifts the veil and offers the cup. What the soul remembers decides how it drinks.

Then read the Book aloud, page by page. Even a lost crossing leaves a story: blanks read "...but this, the river has taken", and the epilogue tells how the soul was lost. Every game writes a different life.

FERRYMEN

LANTERN

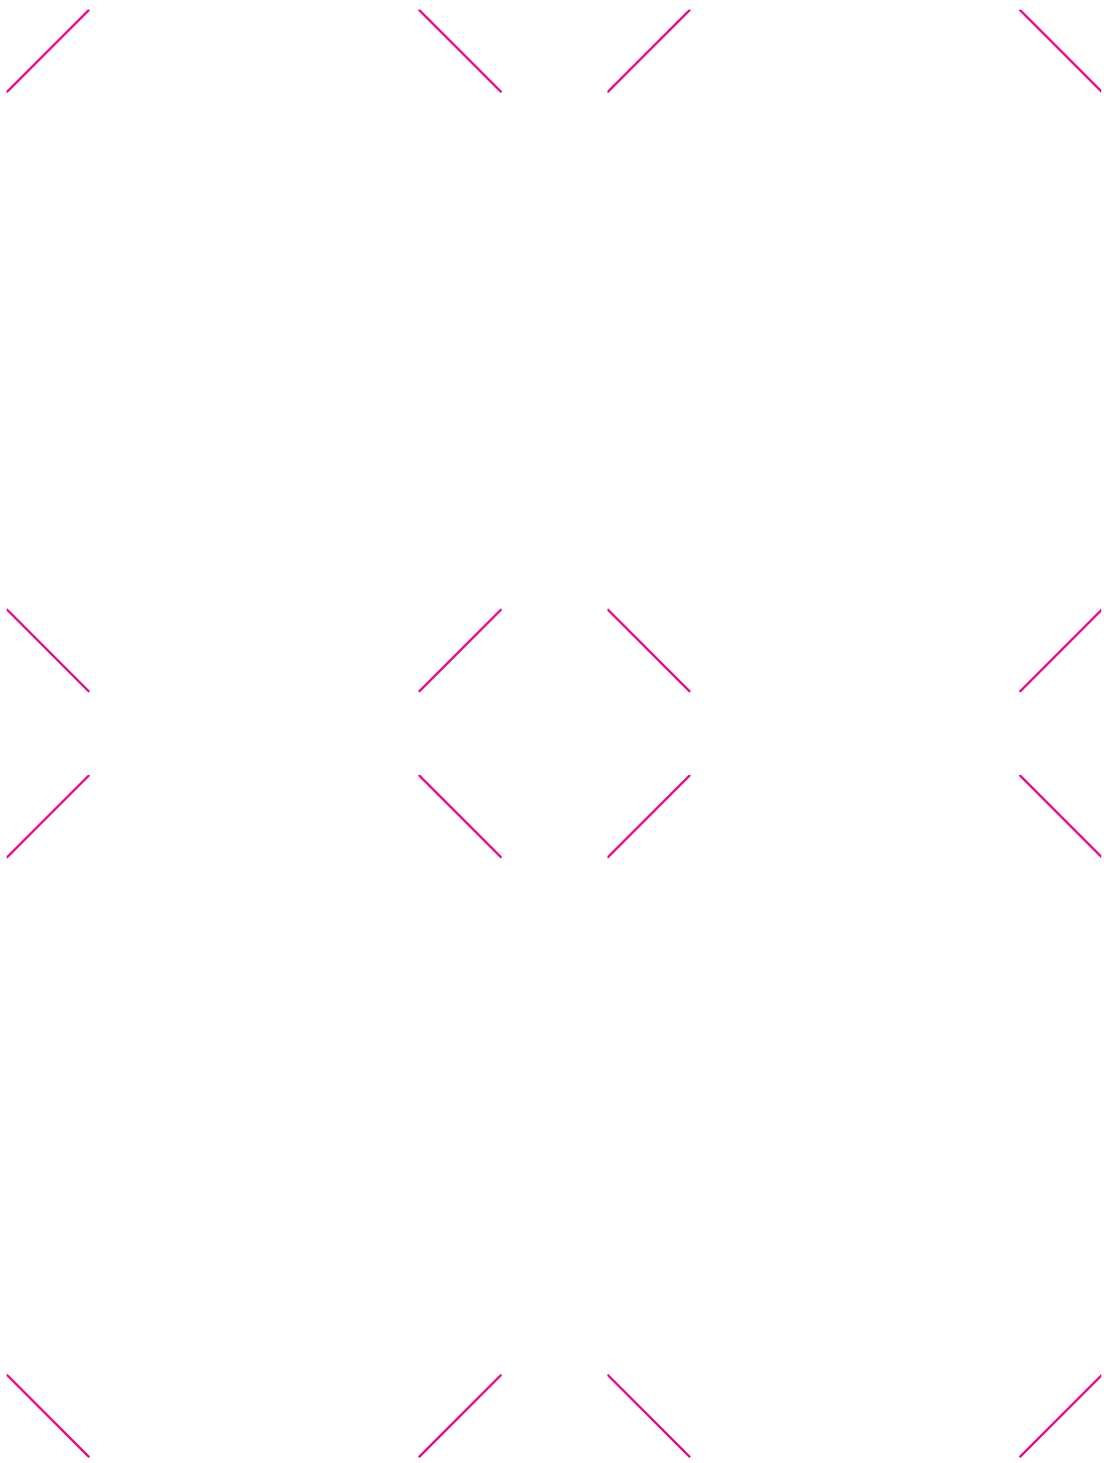

DATE

NETHERBLOOM

RALPH LAUXIE

DIE LINE · pages 4–6 · photo-corner slits (magenta), 11 mm diagonals at each corner of the four 66 × 91 mm wells